Media Services and Public Relations Overview

As economic development organizations, cities and regions compete for business attraction and job creation and much rides on the awareness among key decision-makers of the Atlanta narrative and city assets.

Externally, ADA has three main objectives as it begins to raise the level of awareness and understanding:

- Attract donations by distinguishing ADA from other municipalities and development authority organizations and identify new opportunities to serve the public;

- Create a high level of trust and goodwill among residents, local media and elected officials that promotes and protects ADA and its programs for many years to come and empowers the agency to continue serving.

ADA seeks to engage a firm to manage an aggressive, proactive and integrated-approach communications and public relations program. There are many new and existing opportunities on the horizon and the ADA seeks to tell its story and shape its identity and reputation for the long term.

To achieve its' objectives, ADA intends to implement a number of strategies, including, but not limited to the following:

- Enhance the depth and breadth of ADA media coverage to increase overall awareness and to raise the profile of Atlanta's economic development efforts and accomplishments;
