

Optimizing YAI's Central Park Challenge

YAI is a New York-based nonprofit organization that provides services to children and adults with intellectual and developmental disabilities (I/DD), their families, and community and corporate partners in New York, New Jersey, and California. For more than 60 years, YAI has been a leading force in the evolution toward a world in which people with I/DD live, love, learn, and work alongside their typically developing peers. YAI's 4,000 staff members are committed to seeing beyond disability, providing opportunities for the people we support to be as independent as possible in an environment that is open to and accepting of each person's unique abilities. Everyone has the right to be part of the community, and we help people build skills and develop relationships and connections. The ability to be productive and participate in purposeful experiences in a variety of environments allows people to be viewed as contributing to, not burdening, society.

Central Park Challenge (CPC) is YAI's biggest event of the year. Held annually on the first Saturday in June, CPC draws thousands to Central Park for a celebration of neurodiversity. From 8 am to noon, people YAI supports, their families, YAI staff, and the general public enjoy a festive atmosphere in and around the park's Naumburg Bandshell with music, games, a young people's race, and a signature 3K walk around the park's southern loop. Hosted each year by WABC-TV news anchor Bill Ritter, CPC also does double-duty as a fundraiser, drawing between $400K and $600K to support YAI and its affiliates' programs through a combination of corporate sponsorships, peer fundraising on centralparkchallenge.org, and teaser events. Recent sponsors have included Bank of America, SL Green, Aetna, and McGraw-Hill.

Because YAI has a renewable permit to hold this event – something the NYC Parks Department no longer makes available – we are looking for ideas on how to optimize this legacy opportunity by raising CPC's profile, interesting more members of the general public in the event, and amplifying awareness and understanding of YAI's approach to disability support services. In tandem with a separate, ongoing consultancy dedicated to raising awareness about the agency, YAI is looking for a creative partner familiar with special events, marketing, and fundraising, who can present a solid strategy to reimagine CPC as a one-of-a-kind summertime event known beyond our community.

Agency Background

Founded in 1957 as the Young Adult Institute, YAI is a leading nonprofit provider of supports and services for people with intellectual and developmental disabilities (I/DD). YAI's 4,000 employees provide supportive housing, education, habilitation, behavioral supports, crisis intervention, medical, dental, and mental health care, job training, community integration, social enrichment, and information and referral services for more than 20,000 people with I/DD, and their families, throughout New York, New Jersey, and California, every year. YAI and its four affiliates (Premier HealthCare, Manhattan Star Academy, International Academy of Hope, and National Institute for People with Disabilities-New Jersey) work collaboratively and share expertise to improve quality of life for children and adults with I/DD.

Mission

YAI's programs empower people to make informed decisions about their own lives and support them in achieving their own goals. We collaborate with people's circle of support to ensure person-driven services and continuity of care. Regardless of age, diagnosis, or intensity of support required, YAI is committed to seeing beyond disability, providing opportunities for people to live, love, work, and learn in their communities. We understand that everyone wants to live as independently as possible in a world that is open to and accepting of our unique abilities. Everyone has the right to be part of the community, and we help people build skills and develop meaningful relationships and connections. The ability to be productive and participate in purposeful experiences in a variety of environments allows people to be viewed as contributing to, not burdening society. A summary of YAI's service types appears in the attached appendix.

YAI Organizational Capacity

YAI is one of the largest healthcare nonprofit organizations in the New York metropolitan area and continues to expand within and outside of our home region. YAI programs benefit from a robust administrative infrastructure that includes centralized human resources (HR), communications, information technology (IT), training, quality and compliance, and financial services. Across all YAI's affiliates, services, and programs, our commitment to the highest quality standards remains firm. Our administrative support departments collaborate regularly to meet programmatic needs, ensuring quality and consistency throughout our agency.

YAI leadership is regularly asked to contribute to the ongoing conversation about disability support and the direction our field is traveling. We regularly testify before New York State legislative committees and the New York City Council and have consultative status with the United Nations Economic and Social Council. As a consulting organization to international partners, we have recently served as an advisor to the governments of Jordan, Saudi Arabia, and South Korea, among others.

YAI is a member of several provider organizations and consortia in the field of I/DD, including the local Developmental Disabilities Councils and the Interagency Council of Developmental Disabilities Agencies in New York City; the New Jersey Association of Community Providers; the California Disabilities Services Organization; and at the national level, the American Network of Community Options and Resources, which allows us to network with peer agencies and keep ourselves abreast of changes in government policy, budgets, and best practices in the field.

YAI Significant Distinctions, 2018-Present

- YAI's growth has been reflected by Crain's New York Business industry rankings. In 2020, YAI ranked #12 in the publication's list of Largest Health Care Nonprofits. In 2021, we were ranked #11, and in 2022, we were ranked #8. On Crain's list of Top 25 Nonprofits of New York, we were ranked #25 in 2018.
- In 2018, YAI CEO George Contos was asked to join New York City's Crisis Prevention and Response Task Force led by former New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio and First Lady Chirlane McCray.
- YAI's Long Island region was named Top Workplace by Newsday in 2019.
- In 2019, CEO George Contos ranked #45 in City and State magazine's Nonprofit Power 100. Contos also appeared on the 2020 list.
- In 2022, the National Committee for Quality Assurance recognized Premier HealthCare, YAI's medical and dental affiliate, as an exceptional Patient-Centered Medical Home healthcare provider.
- In 2021, George Contos was recognized by Crain's New York Business in "Notable in Nonprofits and Philanthropy."
- In 2021, Premier's Hope Levy was recognized on Crain's New York's "Notable in Health Care list."
- In 2021, YAI earned a Platinum Seal of Transparency on GuideStar.
- YAI's Center for Innovation and Engagement was selected as a semi-finalist for 2021 NYC Imagine awards.

Central Park Challenge History

Central Park Challenge is YAI's biggest and most visible event. CPC traditionally attracts as many as 2,000 people from the greater metropolitan area including people YAI supports, staff, family members, YAI vendors, volunteers, corporate sponsors, and community members. Although CPC draws a largely New York/New Jersey audience, beginning in 2021, YAI's California programs began participating, chiefly through remote technology and pre-recorded video content.

Over its 30+ year history, CPC has evolved to reflect the needs and interests of the agency, available resources, and production environment. A festival atmosphere for people with I/DD has been a consistent element while the complement of activities has changed over time.

The event began in the 1980s under a different name as a competitive run. Initially held in the suburbs to encourage fitness among the people we support, it eventually moved to Central Park's Naumburg Bandshell where, over the last few years, it has developed a hybrid personality. CPC has variously featured a four-mile run, 3K walk, family fun area, young people's race, a slew of musical and dance performances, and booths providing information about YAI's services. In 2020 and 2021, CPC was held virtually, with long-time host Bill Ritter of WABC-TV Eyewitness News serving as all-purpose anchor, stringing together performances and video clips of YAI programs in action.

Planning during the pandemic also led to a constellation of pre-CPC activities to galvanize enthusiasm and support from within the YAI community. Beginning in January as a series of a voluntary online activities, these "Central Park Challenges" encouraged people we support, staff, and family members to conduct advocacy and outreach with legislators, participate in online discussions, host craft and cooking activities, and celebrate at our newly coined "social dis-dance parties." Among YAI residential programs, these 'pre-game' events gave CPC renewed energy, so we have continued them in 2022.

This year YAI made the decision to eliminate the four-mile run, which had high operating costs, did not generate much fundraising interest, and for the most part did not involve people with disabilities.

Event fundraising has transitioned in recent years as well. Historically CPC enjoyed corporate sponsorship and benefited from small events held all spring in YAI programs. Starting in 2019, YAI began emphasizing peer fundraising whereby staff, family members, and solicit their own networks for contributions through an online portal at www.centralparkchallenge.org. Buoyed by social media, monies accrued through peer fundraising have grown over the last five years so that they now represent the majority of revenue raised. Sponsorships and smaller events continue, chiefly in YAI programs, though these typically generate more goodwill in the community than revenue.

A selection of CPC highlight videos through the years appears here.

Project Scope

We are seeking a firm to step back with us and take a critical look at CPC, evaluating its potential and developing a strategy to optimize the event, increase revenue, engage YAI audiences, and build understanding of our work.

YAI is keenly aware of the institutional value of this marquis placement – Central Park on an early summer weekend – to raise awareness of YAI's brand, our menu of services, and the need for person-centered supports for children and adults with I/DD. Existing elements that must remain include:

- Central Park permit for the first Saturday in June from 8 am to noon;
- a location in and around Naumburg Bandshell in Central Park's southeast corner;
- a commitment that children and adults with I/DD have a meaningful presence throughout the event. (While we are eager to increase audiences across-the-board, it is imperative that those supported by YAI feel some ownership over CPC.)

CPC must continue and grow as a fundraiser, with sponsorship opportunities and peer fundraising alongside whatever recommendations might come through external recommendations. The fundraising campaign begins each year on January 1 when the new website goes live.

Apart from these guideposts, the canvas is blank. We seek creative and actionable ideas for the full January-to-June season, which may include online or in-person warm-up activities, digital campaigns, programming for small groups or families, all culminating in a Central Park celebration on the first Saturday in June. The park festival itself might involve a concert performance, a group fitness challenge, a rally, an exhibition, or a hybrid of multiple new and existing activities. The selected partner should expect to research the event and its audiences, conduct a landscape analysis, and explore permissible uses of Central Park to produce a strategy for a revitalized CPC in 2023.

This year's CPC takes place on June 4. YAI strongly encourages interested firms to attend to get a feel for the event and our community. Some understanding of the existing event may inspire new ideas or refinements to the existing activities.

Proposals:

YAI welcomes responses from event, fundraising, and marketing firms of any size who share an interest in helping redefine Central Park Challenge.

Proposals should include:

- A description of the firm's capacity
- Bios of key project personnel
- Experience with similar projects
- Outline, timeline, and details of the project approach the firm envisions to meet our objectives
- Proposals may specify marketing, fundraising, social, or recreational activities to redefine CPC for years to come.
- Some understanding or experience with NYC Department of Parks and Recreation permitting requirements, fees, and allowable and non-allowable activities.
- Client references: organization name, phone number, and email for at least two current clients for which you are providing services similar to those you propose.

We seek strategic recommendations to optimize the opportunity presented by having a grandfathered permit in Central Park, not assistance with logistics or event production. In producing CPC in 2023 and beyond, YAI may determine it needs to contract additional help, but our current needs are more strategic. Though this RFP reflects a proscribed deliverable, there is the possibility of an ongoing consulting relationship with YAI at its conclusion.

YAI anticipates expenditures in the range of $50,000 to $75,000 to support this project.

Appendix: YAI Services

Residential Services: YAI has been providing residential services since 1972. YAI currently operates 98 certified, 24-hour homes in New York City, Long Island, and New York's Hudson Valley region, more than 55 supportive apartments, and four respite homes under the auspices of the state Office for People with Developmental Disabilities (OPWDD). We continue to collaborate with OPWDD throughout downstate New York to develop homes for transitioning youth and, even during the pandemic, opened new supported residences to serve this population. Additionally, YAI has received numerous awards in California to operate several Community Crisis Homes and Enhanced Behavioral Supports Homes for children and adults with I/DD and intensive behavioral needs.

YAI's residences are home to people with I/DD of all ages, diagnoses, and clinical needs, including those with age-associated conditions and dementia. We support people with intense needs and behaviors that put them at risk as well as those with less significant needs for support and the ability to live in relative independence. All our homes are staffed with a nurse and have access to an on-call nurse 24 hours a day. Our nurses have 24-hour access to our Medical Director. Furthermore, each residential team establishes key relationships with medical and psychiatric providers, community paramedicine programs, and hospitals in the neighborhood for 24-hour access to care, which is monitored by the program nurse.

YAI has a long history of providing residential services to people with I/DD who are aging and have advanced care needs. Our goal is to support people through the lifespan and allow them to age in place in our homes in the community. Ten of our supported residences were designed expressly for people with I/DD who are aging and/or medically frail. Of note is our East 35th Street home in Manhattan, which is staffed with nurses on site 24/7. This model program has generated interest from organizations within and outside of YAI since its inception because it was developed as a specialty home for people with I/DD and comorbidities. Staff are proud to provide progressive, compassionate, and individualized services to people who would otherwise have had to be admitted to skilled nursing facilities.

When people in our residences have an increase in care or oversight needs, we do everything we can to allow them to remain in their current placement. Services are guided by our manual on aging and I/DD, which is used to provide education and training to staff on geriatric issues; as a screening system for older adults to obtain a more accurate differential diagnosis and facilitate an effective treatment plan; and for intervention guidelines to better meet the needs of seniors supported by YAI. We provide ongoing assessment of people we support in our homes and maintain an active list of those who have a current or anticipated need for barrier-free living or greater medical oversight. When possible, we make room changes and use environmental modifications, increased staffing, and technology to help accommodate emerging needs. When necessary, we transfer people to other YAI homes that better suit their health and safety requirements. In all instances, we work collaboratively with each person's family, care manager and service providers to ensure that services are cohesive and responsive to each person's needs and preferences.

Behavioral Services: YAI's experience providing crisis intervention and stabilization began more than 35 years ago with our crisis program in New York City, funded by OPWDD. Operating in Manhattan and Queens, this program provides behavior management and crisis counseling to caregivers who have a family member with an intellectual/developmental disability (I/DD) residing with them. In 2016, we began working closely with the national Center for START Services to develop and implement START (Systemic, Therapeutic, Assessment, Resources, and Treatment) in New York City. An evidence-based model grounded in principles of positive psychology and personal strengths, START offers crisis response, crisis mitigation, and services to children and adults with I/DD and co-occurring behavioral/mental health needs. We also operate a START Resource Center, a 24/7 intensive behavioral respite program in which we provide positive engagement, including recreational and skill-building activities, in a therapeutic milieu. START services use trauma-informed care and a holistic approach to individualized plans. This program includes development of linkage agreements between YAI and community service providers to develop a coordinated system of support for people with I/DD and behavioral or mental health crises. Linkage agreements provide a framework to allow partners to work together with the goal of establishing consistent case level and intra-agency responses that strengthen supports and treatment outcomes. In 2019, we began operating START services in California. Over the past four years the YAI START programs have established more than 65 linkage agreements with hospitals, schools, voluntary and other community providers with no conflicts of interest. These partnerships have resulted in communities developing a greater understanding of people we support through psychoeducation and shared participation in special events.

Behavior Support Plans: YAI provides behavior support in all our programs, particularly in our residences. Our Behavior Intervention Specialists (BIS), BIS Supervisors, and Assistant Behavior Intervention Specialists (ABIS) work under the Director of Psychology to conduct assessments of each person's habilitative, behavioral, and psychiatric needs and develop and implement effective interventions to help support those needs. YAI always considers a full personal history and involves each person's family and circle of support when conducting assessments and creating plans. Our individualized service plans are customized to address all inter-related factors that require remediation to ensure effective development and to prevent future crises. This process begins during intake and extends throughout a person's time receiving support. Our Behavior Support Plans (BSPs) are strengths-based and person-centered, focusing on positive engagement utilizing the PERMA (Positive Emotion, Engagement, Relationships, Meaning, Achievement) approach from positive psychology in addition to tenets of Applied Behavior Analysis. Interventions include strategies and supports designed to establish or increase adaptive/replacement behaviors, and support more independent and personally successful living. Prior to implementation, BSPs must be agreed upon by the person and/or authorized representative and approved by YAI's standing Human Rights Committee. The BIS is responsible for training and modeling plans with Direct Support Professionals (DSPs), and assessing plans and data to ensure proper implementation, monitor progress and make any necessary updates.

Day Services: YAI provides a full spectrum of adult day services which include site-based Day Habilitation, Community-Based Day Habilitation “Without Walls,” Prevocational Services, and Supportive Employment. For people who require services in-home, we offer Community Habilitation, for which trained specialists provide individualized skills training and neighborhood activities delivered from a person's home and neighborhood. YAI has customized some of its day habilitation groups to meet the needs of seniors who require a slower paced environment or increased oversight. We have developed a specialized curriculum for seniors and people with I/DD with dementia that includes staff training in these areas, and facility design.

The emphasis of day habilitation is participation in the larger community. When people spend too much time alone, they can become withdrawn and isolated. Being part of a vibrant community and engaging in shared pursuits is key to every person's wellbeing, no matter their ability. Staff providing day services are trained in progressive teaching and group work skills. These include allowing for choice of and within activities and how to maintain behavioral control by interacting with each person and maximizing engagement; letting people do as much as possible by themselves; using language that people understand; using models, rules, prompts and multi-sensory tools with materials using all appropriate senses; effectively using praise to reinforce participation and group objectives; encouraging people to listen and respond to each other (using a peer interactive model); and reinforcing teaching through incidental opportunities. YAI staff build positive relationships with the people they support and create positive environments in which people feel safe and supported.

Medical/Clinical Services: YAI and Premier HealthCare, YAI's medical and dental affiliate, have been providing medical services and therapies for more than 24 years. The YAI Center for Specialty Therapy (CST) enhances the lives of people with disabilities using a range of therapies that support greater independence. CST provides psychosocial evaluations, psychological testing, specialized assessments for autism, guardianship evaluations, as well as audiology, occupational and physical therapy, speech language pathology, nutrition, psychiatric evaluations and individual, group and family psychotherapy. CST works collaboratively with Premier, which offers high-quality primary care and specialty outpatient services, including internal medicine, dentistry, pediatrics, psychiatry, podiatry, neurology, dermatology, endocrinology, and ophthalmology. Beyond being outstanding medical professionals, our doctors, nurses, and therapists are uniquely trained to care for children and adults with I/DD, people with comorbidities such as dementia and psychiatric conditions, and other at-risk and medically underserved populations. Premier offers a unique desensitization program that helps people overcome a fear of doctors and dentists, and a comfortable environment in which every patient's particular needs are understood. Committed to advancing health equity for a vulnerable population, Premier has been recognized as a Patient-Centered Medical Home by the National Committee for Quality Assurance (NCQA).

From the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic crisis, YAI and Premier partnered on the expansion of telehealth and mobile doc technology, making high-quality care accessible to people unable to leave their homes. When we collaborated on a COVID vaccination strategy, we reached 98 percent of those who gave consent as early as March of 2021, stabilizing our community and dramatically improving the quality of life for people living in YAI residences.

Care Management: To add to our competencies, YAI also has more than 20 years' experience providing case management/service coordination to children and adults with I/DD living in the community and in state-certified settings. From our years in case management and service coordination, we have vast experience with developing individualized service plans; locating services; linking and referring people to services and supports in the community; providing ongoing monitoring of satisfaction with services and providers; advocating with and/or on behalf of each person; and working collaboratively with each person, their circle of support, and the interdisciplinary team. As of 2018, the case management system in New York State was transferred to Care Coordination Organizations (CCOs). YAI staff continue to work collaboratively with the care managers from the CCOs on person-centered planning and information sharing to develop each person's Life Plan and ensure continuity of care for people we support.

Assistive Technology: YAI has found that technological supports can increase a person's independence and help to address challenges to operating successful programs that meet the unique needs of people with I/DD. Through the expertise of the staff at YAI's Center for Innovation and Engagement and Center for Specialty Therapy, we can assess individuals' needs, equip the homes with assistive technology, and provide appropriate staff training to facilitate their use. The use of technology can allow people to live in less restrictive environments, even those with a need for a higher level of support. When considering technology, we will work with people to identify where they aim to gain more independence. This may include new ways of managing medication or help with meal preparation or housekeeping. When in-person visits are not possible, technology may be used to allow people to make virtual visits and participate in community and family events. For someone who does not use words to communicate, it may be important to introduce a device that converts emotions into language. Such support not only increases a person's independence but can help to address challenges to operating successful programs that meet the unique needs of people with I/DD who need them.

International Academy of Hope (iHOPE)

The International Academy of Hope (iHOPE) is a highly specialized private school focused on educating students, ages 5-21, with traumatic brain injury (TBI) and multiple disabilities. It fulfills an unmet need in the community while serving as a model of best practices in the delivery of special education services. iHOPE provides students with a literacy-rich curriculum that incorporates a multidisciplinary and collaborative program including cognitive strategies, small group instruction, assistive technology, therapeutic intervention, behavior management, physical rehabilitation, social interaction, and transition services.

iHOPE opened its doors in 2013 for six children as a therapeutic and academic school for students with TBI and multiple disabilities. Since then, iHOPE's enrollment has continued to expand to more than 80 students, as families, advocates and educators have recognized the school as a leading institution in the field of traumatic brain injury. In 2019, as iHOPE continued to gain recognition within the greater community and field of disabilities, a partnership was formed with YAI, a leading nonprofit organization providing supportive programs for adults and children with intellectual and developmental disabilities. Together with YAI, iHOPE has amplified its focus on student learning and in April, moved to a new site that enables the school to provide more comprehensive support in a custom-designed facility.

Manhattan Star Academy (MSA)

Manhattan Star Academy, a school for children with generalized learning delays from age 3 to 21, starts with the belief that every child has the capacity to learn, grow, and contribute. Teachers and therapists provide students who have a broad range of needs and learning styles with encouragement, support, skills, and opportunities to develop academically and socially. MSA fosters a collaborative, multidisciplinary learning environment. This promotes independence and inclusivity so that MSA students can participate in a global community.

MSA's mission is to provide a comprehensive, developmentally appropriate program focused on the whole student. Instructional activities are designed to maximize students' full potential to be as independent as possible. Our learning environment promotes the active engagement of our students utilizing a multi-modality approach to learning to facilitate the acquisition of academic and life skills. At MSA, we believe our families are an integral part in the growth of our students and members of our school community. MSA expanded its offerings to include an upper school, serving young people from age 13 to 21, in 2019. In 2022, MSA opened a pre-school for children under 5.

Premier HealthCare

Premier HealthCare offers high-quality primary care and specialty outpatient services at clinics in the Bronx, Brooklyn, Manhattan, and Queens. Open for anyone regardless of their ability to pay, Premier's outpatient services include primary care, dentistry, pediatrics, psychiatry, podiatry, neurology, dermatology, endocrinology, and ophthalmology. Beyond being outstanding medical professionals, Premier doctors and nurses are uniquely trained to care for children and adults with disabilities, along with other at-risk and medically underserved populations.

All four Premier clinics are recognized by the National Committee for Quality Assurance, which classifies Premier HealthCare as a Patient-Centered Medical Home provider. This distinction makes Premier's commitment to continuous quality improvement and a patient-centered approach evident.

National Institute for People with Disabilities of New Jersey (NIPD/NJ)

Founded in 1998, NIPD/NJ is a rapidly growing provider of residential and family support services in New Jersey. With an emphasis on providing opportunities for individuals to live as independently as possible, NIPD/NJ offers supervised and supportive residential programs in New Jersey. Currently, the agency operates 10 supervised group homes, 10 supervised apartment programs, and one supportive apartment in Bergen County. The agency is also a Support Coordination agency in Sussex, Hudson, Essex, Somerset, and Warren counties.

Other NIPD/NJ programs include:

- In-home respite services that support families in their efforts to keep family members with I/DD in their own homes.
- Our Coffee House program, which provides recreational and social activities for adults.
- A skill-building and support program for adults to work on their social skills.

NIPD/NJ currently provides services to approximately 200 individuals. We are firmly committed to helping the people we support achieve their fullest potential for independence, individuality, productivity, and inclusion in their communities.

Other Services:

YAI and its affiliates support families with a variety of in-home services dedicated to helping caregivers. These include teaching and training, behavior management, respite, socialization, and recreation. LINK, our information and referral service, provides in-person, telephone, and online training and support to families and individuals newly acclimating themselves to I/DD services, providers, and eligibility.
